I Walked Over a Rainbow—True or a Lie?

Carolin Löbbert

Can you pick rain drops from trees? Are cowboys riding on flowers? Can snowmen survive the summer time? And is it toothpaste which comes out of the blue and white tube – or is it a greedy caterpillar?

Illustrator and writer Carolin Löbbert has created a special book with riddles for young children: For every riddle, there are four pages. On the first spread, you see a person or an animal doing something, accompanied by a little poem asking a question. On the second spread, there are two possible solutions to the question.

In her humorous pictures Carolin Löbbert asks the reader what's true and what's a lie. She invites us to wonder, asks questions, get weird ideas and laugh.

Reviews

"What protects you from the rain? A flamingo or the umbrella? Questions such as these make children roar with enthusiasm: Not only do they know the correct answer, they also enjoy the zany picture puzzles the illustrator has come up with. Brilliant." – Börsenblatt

"Again and again Löbbert surprises with sometimes funny, sometimes whimsical portrayals. Each picture tells its own story and allows for individual discoveries." – Isabelle Bach, Deutschlandfunk

Carolin Löbbert graduated from the University of Applied Sciences in Hamburg, majoring in Illustration and Graphic Design. Since then, she has presented her work in several group and solo shows – in Tokyo, Antwerp and Berlin among others – and published it in magazines and anthologies. As freelance illustrator, artist and graphic designer she is working with international agencies and brands.
